THE LAWYER OF THE FUTURE:

Building a high performing legal team.
The building blocks for a legal team transformation exercise.

For a long time, simply 'knowing the law' was the sole requirement for legal professionals to deliver legal services. That time has gone. The future legal professional must expand their horizons by learning other skills. These skills can be divided into three basic skill sets: people – processes – technology.

COURSE DATE: 10 to 12 March 2020

TIME: 17h00 to 20h00

VENUE: Kramer Building, UCT Middle Campus, Rondebosch,

THE LAWYER OF THE FUTURE:

Building a high performing legal team. The building blocks for a legal team transformation exercise.

10 to 12 March 2020 (17h00 to 20h00)

UCT Law@work is pleased to present a course on the lawyer of the future.

ABOUT THE COURSE

The legal services market is going through a period of significant change. This change is being driven by 1) technology, 2) on-going pressures on legal budgets, 3) the ever-expanding role of the General Counsel or Chief Legal Officer, and 4) demands from business for the legal function to better align with it and deliver tangible value.

This course will help navigate these changes.

Who will benefit from this course?

- Heads of legal: to build high performing legal teams
- Law firms: to better understand their corporate clients so that they can add more value in a changing, highly competitive environment
- Legal practitioners: to learn about the skills needed to become future ready

COURSE OUTLINE

Having completed the course, participants should be equipped to:

1. Understand why the partnership of people, process and technology – with “people” as the leading part of the equation – is key to developing a high performing team
2. Understand why it is important to map processes so that they can be improved to reduce waste (e.g. waiting, over-lawyering, defects, etc.) and add value
3. Be better able to empower legal teams and align them with the business: Integrated teams have extraordinary capacity to leverage individual strengths, leading to coordinated action (collaboration) for the benefit of the customer
4. Understand how law technology can be deployed to support your people and processes
5. Appreciate that improvement is continuous, because change in the business environment is constant and rapid – processes must adapt, as well as the technology that supports those processes

PRESENTERS

Kevin van Tonder has over 25 years' legal experience, with the last 15 being at Schlumberger in Paris. In Kevin's previous role as general counsel for Schlumberger Legal Shared Services, Kevin developed a passion for transforming the way lawyers deliver legal services to business. He has extensive experience in international legal operations, compliance, and people development and management, within many challenging jurisdictions across the globe. Kevin headed up the transformation project for which Schlumberger was a finalist in the FT Innovative Lawyers Awards, North America, 2017, and is currently an advisory board member of the General Counsel Executive Program, Netherlands.

Wayne Ramsay has over 30 years of broad and deep experience in information systems and digital solutions and thought leadership. He has acted as consultant to AAA merchant banks such as Goldman Sachs and Citigroup, as well as multinational mineral resource companies and the E-Government Unit within the UK Cabinet, where he advised the UK government on their ICT infrastructure risk profile post 9/11, and their Critical National Infrastructure replacement programme. For the past seven years, Wayne has been building law technology.
